BECKHAM IS GREETED BY A CROWDED HOUSE

MANY WERE UNABLE TO GET IN OPERA HOUSE.

HE WAS INTRODUCED BY MAYOR BLUE.

Spoke for two hours to an Interested Audience.

IS MAKING THE RACE ON HIS RECORD.

Makes Comparison of His Administration and That of Senator McCreary When he Was Governor.

CLAIMS WHISKY OPPOSITION

Gov. J. C. W. Beckham spoke to a representative audience at the opera house in this city Friday afternoon in the interest of his candidacy for the democratic nomination for the United States senate.

The opera house where the speaking took place was completely filled, a large number being forced to stand and many turned away unable to see or hear for the crowd. It is estimated that fully 500 people were present, a number of ladies being in the audience. The audience was a representative one of Crittenden's best citizenship and they gave the speaker the closest attention and frequent applause.

At thirty minutes after one Mayor John Blue introduced Governor Beckham in a happy and brief talk. Among other things he called attention to the fact that the democracy of Kentucky is in a measure indebted to Governor Beckham for the privilege of selecting their nominee for senator by a primary election.

The governor was loudly cheered when he stepped forward and acknowledged the introduction. He began by declaring his personal regard for his opponent—Senator McCreary—and continued by saying that the election of either of them to the senate was not a matter of life or death to the state or nation.

He made a point that was well received when he said that he would rather be defeated for the senate than have Kentucky fall into republican hands next year, obviously alluding to the attacks Senator McCreary and General Hays are making on the present party organization in the former's fight against him.

He said he was making this canvass on the record made by his administration. He spoke of the increased democratic majorities under the present party leaders and compared the present state administration with Senator McCreary's when he was governor and with that of Gov. Bradley. He asserted the commonwealth had $680,000 outstanding obligations in addition to the bonded indebtedness. This, he declared, together with the bonded indebtedness, had all been paid almost without the people realizing it, as in no case was there an increase in the tax rate and that Kentucky was one of the four or five states of the Union having no bonded indebtedness. Not only this but out of the same unincreased tax rate the school per capita has been raised considerably this year the state college given a big additional appropriation, the penitentiaries improved, asylums remodeled, the department of agriculture and the geological survey put on a business basis where they can be of some real advantage,

Extracts From Beckham's Speech.

"Show me the 'machine buster' and I'll show you a fellow who is without following at home."

"Those on the inside call it an 'organization,' those on the outside who can't get in call it a 'machine.'"

"If we had enough officers to bestow we would have no 'machine busters.'"

"Lift up the curtain that hides my greatest opposition and you will see the great white aproned army of saloon keepers, who are marshaling their cohorts for my overthrow."

"The saloons are the headquarters from which this slanderous campaign is being conducted against me."

"It is a matter secondary importance whether McCreary or I represent you in the senate, but democratic supremacy must continue."

the confederate home at Pewee Valley bought and equipped, $75,000 given for the Kentucky building at the St. Louis fair and $15,000 to the Kentucky Children's Home Society. All in all he said that more had been done for the cause of education during his administration than for the thirty years preceding, nearly 30 cents of the 50 cents of the tax rate being used for that purpose.

The governor then turned his attention to Senator McCreary's record and canvas, saying that the senator claimed he was leading a mighty reform army that was sweeping over Kentucky and that would rid the state rule, but if the senator would raise the curtain that was hiding this "army" the white aproned hosts of saloon men and bartenders would be revealed, who were against him because he had forced them to obey the law.

He said McCreary was too wily to abuse him openly but had put Hays out to make the charges. He declared Hays had been derelict in his duties as attorney general and as a member of the different boards to which he belonged and that from the beginning of his connection with the administration he had been a chronic sore head—an Ishmael with his hand against everybody.

He declared that the only true charge his traducers have made against him is that he signed a dog law. He brought forth a laugh by continuing that he hardly thought a dog law could be made an issue in a race for United States senator and if it was an issue the record showed that during Senator McCreary's term as governor he had signed two dog laws and in this one respect he was willing to admit that McCreary's had been superior to his own.

The governor took up the railroad rate bill, declaring it was the pioneer of all rate regulation laws and was a legacy from Goebel. This and the county unit bill, he declared, were the crowning pieces of legislation enacted during his administration, the latter bill and his enforcement of the Sunday law being responsible for the hot fight being made on him by the saloon element. He said the bulk of the stories circulated against his administration emanated in the back rooms of saloons and were circulated by whiskey men and their friends.

He closed his remarks with a pretty tribute to the ladies present, adding that their presence at the different speaking appointments indicated the interest they were taking in the present campaign and that this was well as when a moral question was involved woman was much quicker to find the right side than man and that when a question of liquor domination was involved they were ever on the alert.

The governor spoke for two hours and his address no doubt strengthened his cause in this county. He left on the 3:40 train for Corydon, where he spoke Friday night. He was accompanied by Secretary of State Harry McChesney and Colonel Harry Tandy of his staff. The party came here from Salem, where the governor spoke Thursday evening.

Schwab Back.

M. Schwab has purchased the produce business of Jean & Co. and will return to this city at once and take charge of the produce house in the Pierce building. This will be agreeable news to his many friends. Schwab has always been a quiet hustler and his energy deserves success and we hope it will come to him and that he and his family will now locate permanently with us.

FRANCHISE IS REFUSED TELEPHONE COMPANY.

Council Votes Unanimously on the Question at Tuesday Night's Session.—Sidewalks Ordered.

Tuesday was the regular meeting evening for the city council and several important matters were passed upon.

The Cumberland telephone company's franchise was unanimously voted down.

The city tax supervisors were appointed as follows: Robert I. Nunn, W. T. McConnell, C. J. Pearce.

Driveways were ordered put in across the pavements at J. M. McChesney's lot on Belleville street, and at T. E. Newcomb's on East Belleville street. The council also ordered the street commissioner and marshal to have crossings put in from G. W. Stone's to Chester Grissom's corner, from R. H. Wood's to Frank Wheeler's, from R. F. Haynes' to H. C. Love's. Also across end of Blue & Nunn's lot near I. C. railroad crossing at the Marion Milling company.

A plank walk was ordered put in from the northern Methodist's parsonage to Spurr W. H. Asher's line, he having a walk already in front of his property.

"NANCY HANKS" A GREAT PRODUCER

Is One of the Best Properties in This District.

Have a Thousand Tons of Fine Ore on the Dump and are Running Night and Day.

OTHER NEWS IN AND ABOUT THE MINES

One of the best equipped and best producing mines in this district is the famous "Nancy Hanks" on the Cox farm which is owned by Mrs. M. E. Croft who leased it to the American Lead & Zinc Co., of Cleveland, Ohio, which company afterward sub-leased it to the Albany Mining & Investment company, of Indiana.

The main shaft is down 200 feet and is 6x8 feet. The first drift is at a depth of 112 feet and runs 35 feet in the vein and runs 35 feet on the vein. The second is at the 168 foot level. The third drift is at the 190 foot level and the cap off the mineral is 22 1/2 feet in width at the bottom of the shaft, they are now stopping.

This company has 1,000 tons of fluor spar on the dump now and are running the mill night and day.

The product of this mine is No. 1 fluor spar and lead, which is easy to separate, as at the latest improved machinery has been installed for mining and milling. The shipments run from two to five cars per week and goes direct to the consumers at Pittsburgh, Denver and Birmingham. The company is now preparing to erect a warehouse 30x60 feet on the R. W. Wilson lot across the railroad and near the ice plant and has taken a lease on the lot with option of purchase. As soon as this warehouse can be completed it will be filled with fluor spar which will be used to supply their trade during the winter months when the roads become impassable.

The management of this property has been most satisfactory under Mr. C. E. Radcliffe for several years past but he has tendered his resignation to take effect at once and will leave for Goldfield, Nevada, where he has large interests in gold mining. His successor as general manager and superintendent is W. L. Vera, of Dunkirk, Ind.

Taking Out Lots of Spar.

H. D. Woolford, of the Pittsburg Mining company, having local headquarters near Milliken and general headquarters in Pittsburg, Pa., was here Monday en route to the mines in the Salem district from a visit to Pittsburg, where he went to consult the head office on some matters of importance. He informs us that his company is taking out a great deal of lead and spar and have many tons ready for shipment.

Almost Pure Lead.

The Keystone Mining company in the Sheridan vicinity is taking out what is almost pure lead, in large quantities. Their shaft is down 202 feet and the vein is 12 feet, four inches of solid lead and spar. It is one of the best propositions in this field and is owned by Louisville and

LAST MONDAY WAS MULE DAY IN MARION

Over a Thousand Mules and Horses Were in Town. 40 Head Sold—Good Prices are Realized.

Monday was mule day again in Marion. A party who was interested took advantage of the occasion to count the mules and horses in town and to his astonishment found that there were over one thousand head here. The mule buyers were here from Illinois and from Union and Christian counties. Layne & Leavelle Bros. bought 23 head of horses. R. M. Young bought seven head of young mules. Dave Woods bought three head of mules and others whose names we did not learn bought several head, making in all over 40 head that changed hands and at prices varying from $75.00 to about $200 per head. R. W. VanHooser sold to Lawson Bros. one pair of mules for $40.00.

After the ceremony was said they were invited to where a heavy laden table, with many good things awaited them. They will start on their wedding tour Saturday to the bride's parents, of Glenn Allen, and return to Morley their future home. Mr. Scott is formerly from Ky. Crittenden Co. Miss Wilkinson of Glenn Allen, Mo. Ballinger Co. I wish you much joy and happiness.

Sales of Fine Coach Colts.

Marion is making an enviable record as a stock market. Recent sales of coach colts, the get of J. O. Dixon & Co's. fine coach stallion are as follows: John Vaughn to H. C. Rice, $80.00; R. S. Elkins to H. C. Rice, $75; George Cruce to J. O. Dixon, two, $145; B. F. Walker to J. O. Dixon, $65; S. A. Wilborn, to J. O. Dixon, two, $130; W. H. Guess to J. O. Dixon, $75; Geo. Baker, to J. O. Dixon, $65; Lem Z. Watson to J. O. Dixon, $65; Geo. Stovall to Thos. Briggs, $70.

Marion Zinc Co. Strikes Fine Steam Coal.

A fine vein of steam coal was struck at the 172 foot level and cross cut in the Riley mine and Mr. C. S. Knight, the president of that company, expects to exploit it thoroughly in the near future.

Gen. Hays speaks at Marion Saturday, October 27.

FARMERS INSTITUTE A GREAT SUCCESS

Held a Two Days' Session in This City.

The Meeting is Attended and Addressed by Some of the Leading Agriculturists of This Section.

IS THOUGHT MUCH GOOD WILL RESULT

The Crittenden county farmers institute held an interesting and instructive meeting at the court house Monday and Tuesday. The attendance was very large and the talks were all instructive, practical and to the point.

MONDAY MORNING.

The meeting was opened by Chairman Frank Conger, who introduced Prof. A. S. Goode, of the state experimental station, who spoke at some length on the principles of up grading and feeding of live stock. Among other points of interest he said: "Too many people pay very little attention to the improving of their stock. This is best evidenced by noticing the variety of colors and mixed types of stock running in the pastures." He advocated the breeding of stock along certain lines, viz: "If breeding for beef use beef males; if breeding cattle for milk production use some dairy breed of male and keep on using the same male until the herd is graded up."

Prof. Goode said it does not pay to raise and feed scrub stock of any kind and gave results of experiments to substantiate his argument.

Several other speakers spoke along these lines and cattle raising was discussed pro and con by the institute.

MONDAY AFTERNOON.

The institute was opened by the chairman and Prof. W. H. Scherffius was introduced. He dwelt some time on the importance of farmer's organizations and put forth the motto "Use more brains and let up on the muscle."

He next proved to all present by actual experiment the fact of male and female life in plant life by using the blossoms of the tobacco plant. He went into details and explained the cross breeding of tobacco and showed how the farmers of Crittenden county could cross their tobacco and obtain a better grade and therefore a better price. The cross breeding takes place while the pod is blossoming and he told the farmers how, by the use of a common paper bag they could obtain the best seed. He advised the saving of more seed plants and grading them according to size, length, body, color and weight and afterward grade the seed.

He used in his demonstration a tobacco seed separating machine invented by Prof. A. D. Shammel, of the Connecticut valley experimental station. This machine separates the seeds into three classes, heavy, middle and light weight seeds. The heavy and middle weights may be used profitably but the light weight are useless.

He urged the farmers to get the boys interested in farming and make farm work more pleasant to the growing lads.

A. H. Cardin gave a short talk on selection of tobacco seed and on the curing of tobacco, which was very interesting and instructive.

Ex-Senator R. C. Crenshaw urged the farmer to organize so they could

LOOKING BACKWARD.

Rev. John S. Henry's Reply to Rev. Walker in the Press Twenty-Five Years Ago.—"Second Chapter of the Second Epistle to Paul."

DEAR SIR:—I was a little surprised when I read your article in The Press of June 29, that a man of your years and experience should indulge in such language as I find it contains. Such as "a positive falsehood, lie, etc." Now you have gone beyond the bounds of all rules of discussion. If I believe a man would tell a positive falsehood I would discuss no question with him. I have looked at the article before me from several standpoints. I have tried to excuse you on the ground of being old and childish, then on the weakness of your cause, but the most charitable construction I can place on it is that you been to see your old friends in Tennessee, they have paid you your dues in the ministry." In whisky, you came home, got on a high elevation, sat down and wrote your reply to my last epistle. It would be hard for you or anyone else to convince me that a minister of the gospel would use such language if something serious was not the matter. In the first place you admit that I was correct in the statement that you had said but little on the subject of church members drunk drinking and the reason you assign is that it was so little and inconsistent in the eyes of every judicious man. Then in the next breath you assert I told a positive falsehood about saying you made a clean sweep of temperance people, societies, etc. Now, if you were writing on neither of these subjects you should explain to the people what you was writing about, where it took more than two columns in the press to contain your article. Again, you state I told a positive falsehood about saying you made a broad sweep on temperance people, societies, etc. I will now make a quotation from your former article and see if I did: You will then have a temperance society of God's own making to bring forth all the fruits of the spirit without going into any secret convalesce among pretended reformed drunkards, pharisees and hypocrites who tacitly slander and belie Jesus Christ." Of course the people will expect you to correct these contradictory statements and if you do not do it they will accuse you of being drunk on those values in the ministry. After calling temperance people hypocrites, pretended reformed drunkards, slanderers of Jesus Christ, pharisees, etc. you have even defended secret societies, inalienable rights." I do not know what you mean by "societies" inalienable rights," but I suppose the above is a specimen of your defence. Moreover you will not let a member of your church join a secret society. Now, please tell me how you defend secret societies. You say as to temperance societies you know but one—the church of Christ; I suppose you refer to the church of which you are a member. Now let us look at the faith and practice of your temperance society. You believe it is the privilege of every member of your temperance society to drink liquor, to keep it at home, give it to your neighbors, give it to your wives and children, thus running the risk of making them drunkards and rendering them unfit for heaven. I Cor. 6:10. Such a temperance society the devil could join without making a sacrifice of one of his principles. You make a very unfair charge on the temperance people in accusing them of being hypocrites and carrying concealed jugs and kegs into dark rooms, etc. While I will admit there are some hypocrites among temperance people, you are compelled to admit that the same evil exists in the church, then we find hypocrites. So the same with every organization that human beings have anything to do with in this world. You make a mistake when you say that temperance societies are fostered by local option laws, for the law is fostered by temperance people and societies, etc., and we expect to nurse the young plant and not only carry this district for the law but until our whole people become a temperance nation. P. L. H. Walker to the contrary notwithstanding. You make a very serious charge on the good people of this district who voted for this law, by calling them "robbers". I was not in the county at that time and of course do not feel guilty. But we lived in another and we voted on it about the same time and carried it by a handsome majority and in all that district but one man could be found that would raise his voice against it, he was a young limb of the law, so far reduced by the use of whisky that, not long after, he left between two days under the charge of embezzlement. The God of the Bible is against the whisky cause and no community, no church, no man can prosper that tries to sustain the whisky traffic. Show me a community that sustains it and I will show you a community that has but little respect for religion or the education of the rising generation. Show me a church that sustains it and I will show you a church whose death knell has been sounded. I point to your denomination and the regular Baptist as an illustration of this truth; they once bore a respectable count; but today, with the exception of a few churches, they only have a name in history, and ere long, unless a speedy turn on the whisky subject, God will wipe them off of the face of the earth, for He never intended for his people to engage in it. You try to make a point out of the question I asked you: you say I asked how dare you or I to change the law; you try to evade my question by quoting Heb. 7:12, where Paul asserts that the law was changed. That God had a right to change the law no sane man will deny. Here is the question I asked you "How dare you or I to change the law of God and substitute whisky and brandy for wine?" I now ask that question again, if you have a right to do it tell when and where. You seem to intimate that inasmuch as God created all things and called them good, He, therefore, made whisky. And then you ask why I do not tell the good whisky does; true, it does some good. I am told that it acts as an antidote for snake bites; there are perhaps forty lives saved annually by its use, while upon the other hand 60,000 die annually; out of the forty that are bitten if they were to die, perhaps some of them would go to heaven, but the 60,000, we know there is no heaven for them, 1 Cor., 6:10. If whisky was so beneficial to our race, why did not God reveal its use? With all the wisdom of Solomon he knew nothing about it, or if he did he was too wise to make it, why was it left to be conceived in the mind of a heathen man in Arabia, only a little more than three hundred years ago. I know that the man who receives in exchange for his grain or cider the powerful liquid, supposes the spirits naturally exist in the grain or apples as meal or cider do. They, therefore, infer the Creator intended the spirits for the use of man, as he did the meal or apples. That there is no poison in the meal or apples, that there is none in the spirits. These inferences are invalid and void since it is an indisputable fact that alcohol, which is their substance, does not exist in the apples and grain. This is demonstrable from the fact that the odor or taste of alcohol cannot be perceived in the meal or cider obtained from it in its sweet state. By fermentation the sweetness disappears and alcohol, a new substance, is found to be present; carry the fermentation a step farther and vinegar, another new substance, is produced, still a step further, and putrid, unhealthy exhalations result such as rise from swamps in which vegetable matter decays. Now if God intended us to use alcoholic liquors, because they are obtained from substances which are harmless and beneficial to our race, he must have intended us to breathe the obnoxious vapor and exhalations because they result from the decomposition of vegetable matter, or the putrefaction of sweet animal food. I claim it is wrong to manufacture alcoholic liquors because God's designs are thwarted in every drop that is made.

But you ask where I get my statistics. I thought all men knew where statistics come from. Now, there was a gentleman in my shop a few days before your article came out; it was in the office for publication, however. He used the same arguments you have. Now, I want to know whether you borrowed your ideas from him, or he borrowed his from you—which was it? I know "Great minds often run in the same channel," but seldom convey their ideas in exactly the same language. You do not seem to like statistics—they prove too much for you. You rather intimate they were taken by temperance men; perhaps some of them were; some were not. We get them from auditors, judges, jailkeepers, etc. Judge Cissell, in his last charge to the grand jury at our April term of court, gave the statistics from the auditor's report of the state of Pennsylvania. He said that 25,000 criminals and paupers were being supported by that state; out of that number 21,000 stated that the cause of their condition was intoxicating drinks. He furthermore stated that eight out of ten that he had sent to the penitentiary during the last thirteen years had stated the use of intoxicating liquors as the cause of their crimes. He also said he had recently sentenced thirteen to the penitentiary and every one said whisky was the cause of his condition. Now you say that the good people who want to put a stop to as much of this as possible, are "robbers".

But you will persist in the assertion that I would have a right to take brandy for my dues in the ministry and say "I would not violate any law if I would not drink too much". I cannot help but think what a great difference there is in you and the apostle Paul. You say that I, as a minister, can drink spirituous liquors without violating the law of God. Paul says I must not, 1 Tim. 3:3. He says a deacon may drink a little wine (not brandy or whisky) but he is not to use much wine, 1 Tim. 3:8. You try to prove that ministers should use whisky or brandy because the priest received it from the people, and then when you try to make a point on my last article you say that the law was changed. This Paul admits, for he says, "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law." Heb. 9:12. One of the reasons given for this is, those old priests were so imperfect and sinful. Some of them would have even perished through wine and strong drink." Isa. 28:7. Now, one of the changes of the law is that the priests of the new testament are not to use it at all. Now, you see, you try to twist and distort the bible to gratify your depraved whisky craving appetite.

You say "God made it your duty to champion the whisky and brandy question when he made it your duty to defend the inalienable rights of man," but you have no where informed me what you mean by "inalienable rights." Please tell me in your next.

You persist in the assertion that Christ drank wine and then you try to make a point and say that I slandered Christ. Well, let us see if I did. In order to make your point you intimate that the wine he drank was an intoxicant. Now, why did you not assert that it would intoxicate? The reason is you knew you dare not do it, for you are too well acquainted with the scriptures, but you will intimate it would just in order to delude men who were not so well acquainted with the bible. Yes, you will slander your Savior to carry a point.

It has a ways been an argument by anti-temperance men that Christ drank intoxicating wine; many of them knew no better, but you do, and are, therefore, willfully misleading them. Now, I will admit that in instituting the supper he used wine. Mark, 14:25. I will also admit that he made wine. John 3:7. But I will not admit that it would intoxicate. If the wine that Christ used in instituting the supper, or the wine he made at the feast, would intoxicate, then he destroyed that portion of the scripture that says: "Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth His color in the cup—at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." Prov 23:31, 32. Here we are not to look on wine, as Clark, the commentator, says, "when it sparkles in the cup or wine that would produce intoxication. This he did not do, for he declares: 'Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill'. Matt. 5:17.

Now, think about what you are doing. You try to hold your Savior up to a drunken world as one that drank intoxicating beverages; that Redeemer that called you from among men to preach Him to sinners as the all-sufficient savior, then intimate he drank intoxicating wine! What a crime for a man to be guilty of with the Bible in his hands!

Revival at Cedar Grove.

EDITOR PRESS. Will you please allow me room in your valuable paper to thank the good people of Cedar Grove, Livingston county, for their kindness shown me while there assisting their pastor, Rev. B. L. Yates, in a revival meeting? I am glad to state I had a special invitation.

tion, went and served the people the best I could. By the help of God had a ten days meeting. The Lord wonderfully blessed us there in the work. I heard the shouts of many new born souls on the account of giving up their sins and accepting Christ as their savior. I heard the shouts and praises of many faithful good men and women who have been on the highway of holiness for several years and still say his service is their sweetest delight. I want to speak a word in regard to the young people's prayer meeting. I am glad to tell you the young people have a wide awake prayer meeting. I never met with young people anywhere that I am more delighted with than the ones at Cedar Grove. They come to the front, take part in singing, pray in public and testify to sanctification. It is good to be there, glory to God. Wishing to thank both saint and sinner for their kindness shown me while with you, I am your brother in Christ. REV. W. D. HUMPHREY.

impression on the minds of the people, that our savior used wine as a beverage. This cannot be true and is only done to delude the people who are not acquainted with the Scriptures. I now assert if Christ used wine except as a religious service, He did not fulfill the Scriptures. Now for the reason: In a prophecy, speaking of Christ in the Old Testament, we find this language: "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek." (Psa. 110:4. Paul says of Christ: "He was a high priest forever after the order of Melchizedek." Heb. 5:10.

Now, let us see the law in regard to a high priest's drinking wine. "And the Lord spake unto Aaron, saying: 'Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation lest ye die; it shall be a statute forever throughout your generation.'" Lev. 10:8, 9. Here you see the priests were not permitted to use it while acting in that capacity. Jesus Christ is emphatically styled a high priest. How long had he acted in that capacity? David says forever; so you see there has been no time when Christ could have drunk it, without destroying the law, and this he said He came not to destroy but to fulfill. In conclusion I will say that I have noticed about all you have said by way of argument. I would like to say more but space in The Press forbids it, but will give the rest of my argument in my next.

You say, if I want to discuss the inalienable from the Scriptures, of the liquor matter, set the day and let you know. I suppose you desire an oral discussion; this I cannot consent to do for the following reasons: First, Because you commenced the discussion in The Press. I had no alternative but to answer you, now the people have been reading it, and it would not be right to change it to an oral discussion without it was discussed in every neighborhood in the county and this I have not time to do.

Secondly, Because I know your reason for a change; you want to act the clown and have a silly crowd laughing at your clownish remarks; this you cannot do through The Press, therefore you want a change; I cannot give this opportunity.

Thirdly, I cannot consent because you have exhibited a considerable degree of temper after you had five weeks to think over what I had written; what would you do in an oral discussion? No, sir! I cannot consent; it would take too many hands to hold you and I am not able to employ them. J. S. HENRY.

TWENTY-FIVE-YEARS OLD NEWS.

(Press, July 20, 1881)

Dr. Dean authorizes us to say that he is no longer a candidate for the legislature, having concluded to re-enter a more lucrative business—the practice of medicine. He bows and retires in due season before the days of the rail road.

It seems that there are two Evansville and Jackson railroad companies, one claiming that the other is illegal on account of its organization being formed out of the state. Mr. Nesbitt, the president of a company formed in Henderson, writes a card to the Press asking the people not to retard the building of the road by encouraging the company headed by Mr. Semonin. Our best information is that Mr. Nesbitt is correct. If the matter is of such importance as to occasion a controversy, there is some hope of its construction by one of the corporations.

B. L. Wilborn is no longer rag tearing in the store of J. A. Davidson.—Elvis Moore has entered the lecture field in behalf of local option. Look out, boys. Brownie is a debator and wide-awake temperance man.—Rev. J. L. Edgington preached at Siloam Sunday. We are sorry to know that he had to walk out from Marion, a distance of eight miles to his appointment. Just think of such a useful, good and able minister trudging that distance to preach. It is absolutely ridiculous. —Levlas Correspondent.

At Eddyville last week Ed Riley was shot and killed by A. B. Lewis. Both men are respectable and well to do farmers. An old family feud was at the bottom of the ugly work.

G. G. Hammond entered upon his duties as marshal and tax collector Monday.

Dick Cruce, of this place, is selling fruit trees in Hardin county, Ill. The Gazette says he has chills and urbanity.

There are at least two classes of beings Marion can boast of—her checker and marble players; they are a success in point of tenacity.

Old Morpheus had thrown his sable arms around the prostrate form of Dr. E. L. Carrington and as the weary M. D. drowned every care in the sweet slumber a ravenous rat laid waste to his great toe.

Our young friend Foster Threlkeld, of Hurricane, was in town recently and gave us an order for a quantity of bills of lading. He is doing a good business as forwarding merchant at Hurricane, having the requisite business qualifications and urbanity. We trust he will succeed.

Mr. Richard Cruce, of Smithland, passed through town yesterday en route to Union county. Dick stopped and chatted with us long enough to say that Union owed Livingston a woman and he proposed to collect the debt. He seems to be in earnest and we believe he will dyeer have her.

Miss Mollie Walker is visiting friends in the Ford's Ferry neighborhood.

Mrs. Gray and son and Miss Annie Henry, of Princeton, were guests of Mrs. Cameron Monday.

Mrs. Conant, of Smithland, is visiting Mrs. G. C. Gray, of this place.

W. L. and A. C. Cruce, of this place, and John Woods, of Livingston, moved into a cottage at the Crittenden Springs last week.

Walker-Brown—At the residence of Mr. J. O. Huey, on the 7th inst., at 11 a. m. by J. A. Kirtley, D. D., R. C. Walker, editor of the Crittenden Press, and Miss Mattie Brown.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few of the bride's relatives and intimate friends and after partaking of a sumptuous dinner Mr. and Mrs. Walker and Mr. Walker's sister left for Cincinnati, at which place they took the 5 o'clock boat for their future home in Crittenden, taking with them the best wishes of a host of friends, young and old, of the bride. The Recorder tenders its best wishes and trusts the clouds of adversity will never cast a shadow over their path through life. —Boone County Recorder.

will find by inquiry that in the schools their children attend, Webster's is the Dictionary by which they are trained, and that their schoolbooks conform to this same authority. Is it not best to have the same Dictionary in the home? The constantly increasing sale of Webster's International Dictionary proves that parents are wisely following the above suggestion.

Rev. Lyman Abbott, D.D., Editor of The Outlook, says: Webster has always been the favorite in our household, and I have seen no reason to transfer my allegiance to any of his competitors.

A tale of horror was told by marks of human blood in the home of J. W. Williams, a well known merchant of Bae, Ky. He writes: Twenty years ago I had severe hemorrhages of the lungs, and was near death when I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery. It completely cured me and I have remained well ever since. It cures Hemorrhages, Chronic Coughs, Scrofula, Colds and Bronchitis, and is the only known cure for weak lungs. Every bottle guaranteed by Woods & Orme Druggists, Chicago and St. Louis. ## Epilepsy Fits St. Vitus Dance

Are nerve diseases, and unless checked, lead to destruction of both mind and body. The weak, shattered nerves must have something to strengthen and build them back to health. Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a remarkable nerve tonic and stimulant. It strengthens the nerves, relieves the nervous strain, and influences refreshing body-building sleep and rest. Persistent use seldom fails to relieve these afflictions.

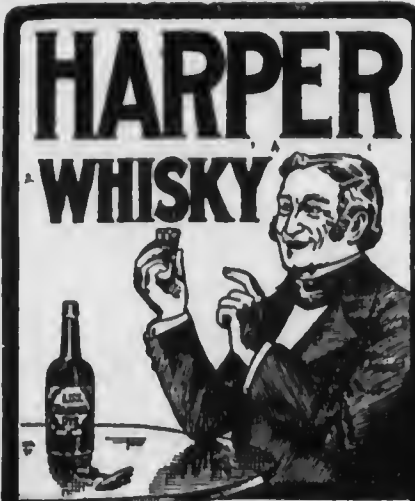

"I was taken with epileptic fits; had eleven in less than 12 hours. My father sent for our family physician, but he could do very little for me, and I grew worse every day, and at last had three doctors with me, and I still got worse. My father heard of Dr. Miles' medicine and bought a bottle of Nervine and a box of Nerve and Liver Pills. I had taken only a few doses until I began to feel better. I took 12 bottles, and it cured me sound and well. It has been worth all the world to me. I recommend it wherever I go. You may use this as a life-long testimonial to the merits of your medicine, for I am enjoying the best of health, and feel that my life and health is due to this wonderful medicine." LEVY WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 2, Boston, Ga.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit you. If it fails, he will refund your money.

We are authorized to announce W. J. Cowper, of Smithland, as a candidate to represent the counties of Crittenden and Livingston in the next General Assembly, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

R. C. Crenshaw, of Christian county, present assistant commissioner of Agriculture, and a candidate for commissioner of agriculture, was in Marion Monday. He has many warm friends here, having assisted in conducting the Crittenden county farmers institute several times.

JOHN R. FARRIS ANNOUNCES.

John R. Farris, of the Salem section, who was here Monday, announced himself a candidate for the legislature from the counties of Crittenden and Livingston. Mr. Farris is well known to most of us, having lived all his life near Salem. He has taken great interest in the Livingston county farmers club and in fact was one of the organizers of it and used his influence to get a bi-county fair organization in Crittenden and Livingston counties. His exemplary life will add much to his strength and will put his ambitious young opponent to his wits if he defeats him.

Notice to Democratic Legislative Candidates:

After a careful investigation of the probable expense of holding the legislative democratic primary election it is estimated that the sum of forty ($40.00) dollars will cover same. And the said sum is hereby assessed against the candidate or candidates for representative. If there be but one candidate he shall pay the whole sum and if more than one candidate then such sum shall be equally divided between the candidates. If after the primary election it be found that this estimate is too small to cover the entire expense, then the successful candidate will pay the deficiency. If the estimate is too large the excess shall be refunded to all the candidates in equal proportions. Any candidate desiring to enter the race and be voted for at said primary will on or before October 21, 1906 notify in writing C. S. Nunn, at Marion, Ky., and then pay to him the proper proportion of said assessment. This October 8, 1906.

C. S. NUNN,

Chairman Crittenden and Livingston Legislative District Democratic Committee.

WM. H. CLARK,

Secretary of Crittenden County Democratic Committee.

AT THE CHURCHES LAST SUNDAY.

Bally day at the C. P. church last Sunday was a decided success. All the officers and teachers were present, the attendance being swelled to almost the one hundred mark. Everyone seemed to enter heartily into the spirit of the work and to receive and appreciate the most excellent Sunday school sermon preached by our pastor, the Rev. Jas. F. Price.

At the Baptist church in the morning Doctor Butler spoke on "The Seven Last Sayings of Christ on the Cross, or the Dying Words of Jesus," after which the ordinance of the Lord's supper was celebrated. At night Dr. J. B. Moody, of Martin, Tenn., preached a strong sermon on "Law and Grace". Good audiences were present at both the morning and evening service.

Alvis-Dorroh Nuptials.

Cards received in the city yesterday announce the marriage at Bowling Green last Sunday, Oct. 7, of Dr. Lee Dorroh, of Fredonia, Ky., and Miss Ophelia Alvis, of Salem. Both of the principles are well known and popular where they reside. Dr. Dorroh recently bought out Dr. Farris at Fredonia and stepped into a good practice. Miss Alvis is a young lady of fine character and is justly popular and beloved by a large circle of friends. They will make their home at Fredonia.

Gen. N. B. Hays will address the voters in Marion Saturday, October 27, at one o'clock p. m.

W. F. COWPER.

MARION, KY., Oct. 9, 1906.
To my Fellow Democrats of Crittenden and Livingston Counties:

I take this method of placing before you my candidacy for the democratic nomination for representative. I do this fully appreciating the importance to the people of the office to which I aspire but feel that the good counties of Crittenden and Livingston will cheerfully honor one of their humblest sons when he has striven to be worthy of the trust of his fellow citizens. If I shall be chosen as the candidate of my party I shall be the candidate of the whole party and not the representative of any faction, clique or machine. Should I be so fortunate as to be nominated and elected I shall count myself the servant of the whole people and advocate measures of general interest to the citizens of my state and do so without fear or favor. I was born and raised on a farm and taught in the public schools and feel that I know the agricultural and agricultural interests of our people and will, if elected, support measures in the general assembly of Kentucky of general interest to them.

My record as a democrat is known and cannot be questioned. The democratic party has never called upon me and called in vain, however periods the hour or uncertain the consequences and a democratic nomination has never gone down in defeat by lack of my support, nor have I been a participant in a bidding convention or a delegate selected by one to make a fusion ticket to defeat the regular nominees of my party.

I hope to see as many of the democrats of the two counties as possible before the primary on Nov. 6 and asking your vote and influence in my behalf I am

Yours Very Truly,
W. F. COWPER.

GOOD CITIZEN PASSES TO GREAT BEYOND.

John Davidson of Levas Neighborhood, Died at an Advanced Age Last Sunday.

John Davidson, an aged citizen of the Levas vicinity, died Sunday, October 7, at noon. He was buried Monday afternoon in the cemetery at Union, Rev. W. R. Gibbs officiating. The deceased was born Nov. 22, 1827, professed religion and joined the Union Baptist church in 1849 and had been a consistent member ever since. He was married in 1851 to Miss Hughes and the union was blessed with twelve children, all of whom are dead except three. F. M. Davidson, of Crittenden Springs; Robert Davidson, of Nebraska, and Mrs. Mattie Larue, wife of L. A. Larue, of this county, are the surviving children. He has two brothers living, Arch and Samuel Davidson, of this county, and one sister, Mrs. Hale, of this city.

Mr. Franks was a good citizen and was respected by all.

Administratrix Sale.

I will, on Tuesday, the 23d day of October, 1906, at the late residence of J. C. Turley, deceased, near Dyeusburg, Ky., offer for sale at public outcry the following property: Crop of tobacco and corn, two hours two mules, two yearlings, lot of fattening hogs, household and kitchen furniture and farming implements. ## "FARMERS INSTITUTE" demand prices the same as large manufacturing concerns. In speaking of Japanese clover he said:

"Japanese clover is a Godsend; we don't know how it got here but it is here and lets make use of it." He urged the sowing of more red clover also and demonstrated the necessity of sowing stock peas and the kind to sow. The whippoorwill, he said, is best for seed and the black variety is best for hay.

Senator Crenshaw advised the raising of more stock and enriching the land raising less tobacco and other crops that tend to sap our soil.
He also urged the farmer to make the farm more attractive to the boy. Prof. Scherffus said commercial fertilizer must be used intelligently to make it pay and urged the farmers to select their fertilizer carefully. He advocates the use of lime on land, especially in raising clover.
TUESDAY—SECOND DAY.

The institute was called to order at 10:30 a. m. Prof. W. H. Sherffius was suffering with a cold and R. C. Crenshaw, the assistant commissioner, gave the lecture on corn breeding, seed corn selection and testing. This lecture was demonstrated by a testing box. R. C.
Crenshaw then gave an exhaustive lecture on alfalfa growing in Kentucky. He put much stress on having the conditions right before sowing the seed. He shows specimens of the plant grown in Henderson, Union, Webster and Crittenden counties. The specimen from Crittenden county was in its second year and was taken from a field that had been cut for hay three times this year.

The fourth crop is now 24 inches high. With thanks for kind and courteous treatment the visitors had received at the hands of the people of Crittenden county, the institute adjourned.

To the Voters:

Having been solicited by my friends to make the race for the legislature in the district composed of the counties of Crittenden and Livingston I have decided to announce my candidacy subject to the action of the democratic primary on November 6, next. As the time is short it will be impossible for me to see all of the voters and I therefore take this method of soliciting your votes. I will see all of you I can and to those not acquainted with me I will say, ask anyone who knows me as to my record in the past, and as to my honesty and ability to fill the office. I am a farmer and have been all my life. I am a democrat and have always been and have always lent my influence to the best interests of the democratic party.

Thanking you and hoping for your support and influence I am yours for the success of the party.

J. R. FARRIS.

"Revenge is an expensive luxury"
Frederick S. Stillwell office over Marion Bank.

G. L. Dial, one of the leading business men, of Sebring, has moved here and is occupying the Long house. He has purchased the Heir-in stock of groceries and will increase the stock and carry every thing demanded of a first class grocery. Mr.
Dial comes to Marion highly recommended and we welcome him and his family to our city.

Card of Thanks.

Carrsville, Ky., Oct. 8, 1906.—
Dear Editor: We wish to extend through the columns of your paper our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors for their many kind acts to us in the death of our son Olin. Friends could do more than they and we shall ever treasure their goodness in our hearts.

MR. AND MRS. T. W. EVERTSON.

Smithland Canning Factory.

The promoters and stockholders of the Smithland Canning company are inbilitated over the jump in the price of tomatoes lately. The company sold 2,000 cases of tomatoes several weeks ago and have about that many more to sell and the prospects are good for getting a fancy price for the remainder of the output of the factory. They expect to get about twenty-five cents a dozen more for what they have left than the price at which they closed the 2,000 cases.

Gen. N. B. Hays, candidate for the democratic nomination for governor, will speak in Marion, Saturday, October 27, 1906, at 1 p. m.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS' TRAINING CLASS

LESSON XLVI.

There is no Sunday School lesson in this week's readings.

DAILY MANNA.

Sunday, Oct. 14.—Christ's loved ones near, Ju. 19:25, 26.
Monday, Oct. 15.—Christ commends his mother to John, Ju. 19:26, 27.
Tuesday, Oct. 16.—Darkness, Mt. 27:45; Mk. 15:35; Hk. 23:44, 45.
Wednesday, Oct. 17.—Jesus Cry of Distress, Mt. 27:47; Mk. 15:35.
Thursday, Oct. 18.—The supposition, Mt. 27:47; Mk. 15:35.
Friday, Oct. 19.—Christ's thirst, they give him vinegar, Ju. 19:28-30; Mt. 27:48, 49; Mk. 15:36.
Saturday, Oct. 20.—It is Finished, Ju. 19:30.

HELPS TO STUDY.

In that gloomy hour when Christ hung upon the cross there was a group of loved ones standing near. True to a faithful mother's heart there stood the Virgin Mary beholding the dying agonies of her beloved son. With her stood the two other Marys, forming the beautiful group of three Marys standing by the cross. The apostles all seemed to be absent except that one that loved him most. In that beautiful group of three noble women stood the beloved disciple, John. In that sad hour of bereavement he gave John to his mother to be her son and committed his mother to the faithful keeping of the loving John.

Nature sympathized with her Lord and Master, the sun veiled his face and refused to behold the dying agonies of his Creator and all nature assumed the weird and sombre aspect of grief and anguish in sympathy with the cross.

In the midst of this supernatural darkness, or rather at the close of it, for it continued for three hours, Jesus uttered his cry of anguish upon the cross, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" O, what darkness and woe must have settled down upon our Savior at this hour. The repetition of his Father's name shows the intensity of feeling that pervades his breast. He had been forsaken by his own race and crucified. He had been forsaken by his apostles, but now to be forsaken by his Father, whose loving voice had spoken in words of comfort at great crises in his life, it seemed more than he could bear. Imperfectly understanding his expression they thought he called for Elijah to deliver him and they watched to see if Elijah would come.

Crucifixion, the loss of blood, the severe suffering produced an intense thirst. In fulfillment of scripture (Ps. 69:21) he cried, "I thirst," and they gave him vinegar to drink from a saturated sponge. Soon after this he uttered the cry, "It is finished," and died. "It is finished"—the law has been perfectly kept and honored, the Father's will has been accomplished, the atonement for the sins of the world has been made, the plan of redemption has been completed and salvation is made possible to man.

THE TEACHER—METHODS OF TEACHING.

ATTENTION—Attention should be 1. Concentrated. If you try to think of two objects at the same time you can think on neither to any degree of satisfaction. 2. It should be delightful. Just as there is satisfaction in eating when we are hungry, so there is delight in giving attention when we are interested. 3. Attention should be of an inquiring and investigating nature. As you cannot tell just what everyone desires at a meal without their asking, neither can you tell the wants and desires of the human mind without inquiry. When you have a class all alert to ask questions and to investigate you have a rapid attention that will result in mind growth. 4. It should be continuous. Attention is a hard strain on the mind and relaxation is necessary, but while we are attending to any one thing attention must be constant.

II. EXTERNAL CONDITIONS OF ATTENTION—The surroundings and external conditions should be favorable. 1. Pure air. An atmosphere laden with carbonic oxide gas produces a drowsy and stupid condition that saps the very life of attention. Good ventilation is a necessity in order that we may have a supply of pure, fresh air. But this ventilation should not be a draft. A current of pure air but damp and cool blowing in on one's back and shoulders is more dangerous than impure air. 2. Comfortable temperature. We should see that the room is comfortable. Children cannot give attention if they are suffering pain. The thermometer should register from 65 to 70 degrees. 3. Suitable seats. While people will sit on any kind of seats for hours without complaining to see a base ball game or a circus show, yet the novelty of the one and the excitement of the former are not present in the school room or church. They must be seated so pleasantly that they will not be conscious of any discomfort.

III. ELEMENTS IN THE TEACHER—1. Preparation. It takes the full teacher to command attention. This is the one indispensable condition. 2. Enthusiasm. This in the teachers is like fire; it catches in the mind of the pupil. 3. Personal magnetism. 4. Cheerfulness. 5. Tact. 6. Concentration.

IV. PRINCIPLES TO WHICH WE CAN APPEAL IN THE CHILD—1. Activity. A healthy child is a live wire. If its activities are in the wrong direction, give it plenty to do in the right direction. 2. Curiosity. There is nothing that appeals to a child more readily than curiosity. If you have an object to illustrate a fact, keep your object from view until time to use it. The very fact that you have something concealed in a box or a paper will keep eyes and minds in that direction until the object is exposed to view. Curiosity is a wonderful magnet. 3. Imagination. This faculty is very vivid in children; hence their love for fairy tales, stories. If they are listless and wandering in their attention a story will often attract them. 4. Affection. Children naturally turn their minds and hearts towards the objects they love. Children usually love those that love them. If you desire their attention love them.

SEARCH QUESTIONS.

1. Who were the three Marys that stood near the cross? 2. What dying request did Christ make? 3. In what language was Christ's cry of distress uttered? 4. What scripture was fulfilled in the thirst of Christ? 5. What is attention? 6. Why is it important? 7. What are the characteristics of attention? 8. What are the external conditions necessary for attention? 9. What are the elements in the teacher necessary to secure attention? 10. What are the principles in the child to which you can resort in order to secure attention? 11. What is meant by the canon? 12. What is the Apocrypha? When was the O. T. canon completed? 13. When was the N. T. canon completed? 14. Why are the Apocryphal books omitted from the canon? 15. What books might seem, at first sight, less needed in the Bible? 16. Why are they needed?

The Deceived Dogs

"I believe that our mistress thinks more of me than of any of you," said the spaniel to the other dogs who occupied places on their mistress' lap. "No, she cares most for me," said the pug.

"You are both wrong, for I am her favorite," chimed in another dog.

"Why should you dispute this matter among yourselves when it is easy to be seen that I am uppermost in her affections?" added a shaggy coated little poodle.

And so it was that the discussion waxed warm between them, and they actually grew angry and snarled and snapped and made ugly faces, all because each of them was sure that he was the best beloved and because they could not convince each other of their respective claims to the affections of their mistress.

Now, while all this was going on the mistress' little boy Willie was lying on

"SHE CARES MOST FOR ME," SAID THE DOG, the floor reading a book and paying no attention to the churlish squabble that was going on among the canines in his mother's lap.

"What are you reading?" asked his mother.

"A nice little story I learned at school," replied Willie.

"Well, come up on my lap and read it to me, my little boy."

And while that she dumped the dogs in a heap on the floor.

"I guess she don't care as much for us as we thought," they each said as they sneaked away.

And I guess they were right at last. —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

MR. ELEPHANT TRIES TO TAKE ADVICE

"Be a man! Be a man!" cried the papa elephant to his eldest son. And the son decided that he would take this advice.

"How can I be a man?" he asked the baboon.

"Well, in the first place, you must wear a man's clothes," replied the baboon.

So Mr. Elephant bought himself a suit of clothes and a hat.

"Oh, my, they are uncomfortable!" he declared. "But I shall wear them."

MR. ELEPHANT SAT DOWN.

"If you are going to be a man," the baboon interrupted, "you must walk on your hind legs."

And so Mr. Elephant wobbled around on his hind legs until he was about phyched out.

"Goodness me!" he exclaimed. "This is tiresome. What does a man do when he is tired?"

"Why, he sits down," said the baboon.

So Mr. Elephant sat down to rest, but he was not satisfied.

"It is almost as tiresome sitting down as standing up," said Mr. Elephant. "What does a man do when he gets tired sitting down doing nothing?"

"He takes a smoke," said the baboon. Then the elephant got a pipe and tobacco and tried to smoke, but he made a wonderful fizzle of it.

He got smoke in his eyes, in his nose and his throat, and he was in a pretty predicament.

"I don't want to be a man!" he cried, while tears streamed down his cheeks. "I am going to try to be a good elephant instead."

"That's what I meant in the first place," said his father.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Sunday School meeting at Weston fine, friends from all parts of the county were there with their baskets well filled, but no one was allowed to look into them until 12 o'clock. Rev. J. R. King not being present, W. J. Hill opened the meeting with a song by the Weston class and observed the program.

Bible lesson 1 John 3:1-12

Prayer by W. J. Hill.

First topic on program was

"What is the need of a Sunday School" by W. J. Hill.

We all enjoyed Bro. Hill's talk and hope to have him with us again soon. Next was the report of our President of State Convention R. M. Franks.

Song by the Baker Class.

What is the duty of Sunday School teachers by Mrs. Annie Smith which was splendid she was cheered by a good song.

Then we were dismissed for dinner my! my! what a dinner it was, to make it better, Bro. Butler Cain furnished plenty of ice water for all to drink, two hours was spent in social and friendly greetings, if any went away hungry, it was his or her own fault.

The after noon service was called to gather with song by Weston and Baker classes. Prayer Rev. J. R. King. Resolution of thanks were read by C. E. Grady. Qualifications of the teachers was taken up by J. R. King which was ably discussed.

We then had a lengthy talk by C. E. Grady and the relations of the Sunday School and public school

Bro. Grady gave us some good thoughts if the day school was what it ought to be we would have less bad boys. Love to all Sunday School workers and good will to men and cousin Catharine Hill.

AN APPEAL TO THE FARMERS.

A new era is dawning in the agricultural world. The time honored methods of our fathers are no longer satisfactory to the wide awake twentieth century farmers.

Nearly every thoughtful farmer is ready to admit under the present system his land is gradually being depleted.

The very appearance of the land prima facie evidence of this charge. The rich dark loam of our boyhood days has changed to a lighter colored stiff clay, while the erstwhile smooth slopes are creased with unsightly gullies.

Where we once gathered 40 bu. of corn per acre, we now gather 25. And crops are decreasing in like proportion. Something is wrong you are willing to admit, but what that something is and what remedy it demands needs all the light of science and experience to answer.

Again, there are many things about rearing live stock that we don't know and practice in this section that would be of great value to us. But time would fail me to recount all the needed reforms in our farming, and I also hasten to admit that my knowledge would be far short of the task. In fact none but a tyro could imagine that he knew it all about the so-called simple vocation of farming. I often think that to become as little children (in teachableness) is as necessary to the greatest success in business life as it is in the religious realms.

So let us open our eyes to these opportunities. I would mention Farmer's Institute, conducted by men of wide and varied experience in farm operations. Our neighboring states have tried and prove the efficiency of these organizations to disseminate information and develop an investigating mind among the farmers. Encouraged by our neighbors success our own commonwealth has inaugurated a system of farmers institutes. The Crittendon County Institute was held last Monday and Tuesday, and we were glad to see it was well attended. Every one who attended that meeting heard many good and practical suggestions.

Fellow farmers let us not be satisfied only with hearing but let us do some of the things recommended by those men of experience.

And let us remember that what they have told us is only a small part of what we have to learn, you will find in farm books and papers all that those speakers told you and more too. Let us all take one or more good farm papers, above all let us make our institute permanent. We should come out occasionally and discuss the methods we are practicing, other industries have already completed an organization of this kind, and have found them indispensable. That is one reason why other industries are foregoing ahead of the farm. Let us join hands, heads and hearts in all that concerns our temporal welfare.

In closing permit me to reiterate that the day of successful farming is past, mind must be an equal yoke, follow with muscle in speeding the farmers plow to the greatest success in the future. Amos

WHAT MADE THE DIFFERENCE

The Bengal tiger and the clown in the show had a lively dispute one day as to which of the two was superior. "Pooh!" said the tiger. "There is not the slightest doubt about it. Look at my great strength. Why, with one blow from my paw I could crush out your puny life. You poor little weakling, I pity you. Your voice is weak, your arms are weak. What chance would you have in a contest with me? You wouldn't hold out for a moment."

"Very well said," replied the clown, "but I carry something in my little think box that can match all your brute strength."

"What do you mean?" growled the tiger.

"I mean," said the clown dryly, "that if you had what I've got and you lack you wouldn't have walked into that trap in the jungle."

At this the tiger began to roar with rage until the cage shook. But the clown seized his little whip and dealt him blow after blow through the bars. The tiger tore madly from end to end of his cage in a frenzy of anger. He threw himself with all his strength against the iron bars, but the clown smiled and whipped him still.

"You villain!" roared the tiger. "If I could only get at you!"

"Ah, that's exactly it!" smiled the clown. "You can't, my friend, and so I win."

"What do you mean?" said the tiger.

"That brains, which put up those bars to keep you in, are worth all your brute strength. That's all!"—Detroit Journal.

The Wolves and the Cougar

Once there were two wolves who had a chicken tree, in which fowls were very fond of roosting.

One day when they went down to the chicken tree to get each of them a bird they heard a snarly-snarly sound and found feathers all around the tree, while every bird for a mile around was either eaten or scared away.

"Who has been robbing our chicken tree?" cried the wolf brothers together.

"Your chicken tree? Your chicken tree?" snarled the cougar, who lay, gorged full, at the bottom of the tree. "Who gave you this chicken tree? Who gave you anything? Who are you, anyhow?"

The wolf brothers made haste to say that nobody had given them the chicken tree, that nobody had given them anything and that they weren't anybody and didn't count anyhow, but their hearts were hot and sore while they said it.

As they were scuttling away they met Bruin, the bear. And when he heard their story he told them of a trap which the hunters had set for the cougars down by the brookside.

"Lead him there," said Bruin, "and you may have your revenge, also you may have as many chicken trees as you can find."

So the wolves went trembling back and told the cougar that they had found a much finer chicken tree for him. When they came to the spot where Bruin had told them the trap was they stepped aside and said they could not walk ahead of so great a person, that he must lead the way and let them follow.

Snip went the trap on the old cougar's foot.

"There," said the eldest wolf brother, "that will teach you not to insult people after you have robbed them."—Worcester Post.

Cobalt

An Evil Spirit Harnessed
To Work For Mankind

Is the evil spirit of the old Saxon miners destined soon to revolutionize the automobile industry?

Back in the middle ages, when the now famous mines of Schneeberg were opened, the Saxon miners were not long in discovering that the silver was nearly always associated with a strange mineral and that it frequently replaced the precious ore altogether. Specimens of this mineral were turned over to the wise men of the kingdom. One and all pronounced it useless. Thereafter, as they mined, and their eyes fell on the constant companion of the silver they were industriously after, the miners, in contempt, dubbed it kobold. That is to say, gnome, or evil spirit; for, like an evil spirit, they said, it was present only to give them trouble.

Kobold, we of to-day still call this metal, which is one of the elements, though the spelling is now cobalt. It was not until the middle of the sixteenth century, many generations after the namers of the metal had been gathered to their fathers, that even slight use for it was discovered. Up to to-day its uses have been limited when compared with other elements; it is still the gnome of old in large measure. But, will this hold good of it in the near future?

"For a number of years I have been working on my electric storage battery, as you probably know," said Thomas A. Edison, in substance, recently. "It has been my aim to build a battery that will take an automobile a hundred miles without having to be recharged. The problem was baffling until I introduced cobalt into the battery cells. Now I believe that I have the battery all right, and the only problem remaining to be solved in order to make the battery practicable is for me to find a way to get cobalt in sufficient quantity and cheaply."

How does Mr. Edison employ cobalt in his battery? He smilingly keeps the secret to himself. But, he says, if only he can solve the one problem now confronting him—that of cheap supply—the use of his battery will cut down the present weight of the automobile by half. This of itself will greatly reduce the price of the machine, thus tending to make it a necessity instead of the luxury that it now is. It will also increase the speed possibilities. Last, but not least, the automobilist will no longer be dependent on gasoline, the favorite motive power of to-day, or steam. Both are objectionable for obvious reasons. Against electricity none of these objections can be raised; it is a noiseless, odorless "fuel."

Thus, Mr. Edison's battery, if the hopes of its inventor in finding cobalt are realized, will bring about a revolution in the electrical world as great as that which took place in the world of water when Robert Fulton demonstrated that a boat could steam her way from port to port even better than she could make the same trip by sail.

Mr. Edison is now traveling about the country, endeavoring to locate cobalt sources of sufficient quantity and purity to cheapen it to the point where his battery will be practicable. Cobalt now sells for two dollars a quarter pound. A few days ago it was worth twenty-five cents more. A quarter of a pound of cobalt has about as much bulk as the same amount of iron. Mr. Edison's bat-

AUTOMOBILIST
WILL NO LONGER BE DEPENDENT ON GASOLINE"

tery calls for a great deal of cobalt, and cobalt at two dollars a pound, Mr. Edison feels, would be looked upon as a luxury by most of those very fortunate persons whose pocketbooks enable them to view even the imported gasoline touring car as a positive necessity to their well-being.

Mr. Edison has inspected cobalt deposits in North Carolina. He has been to Canada. He will go to Missouri. He has other places on his visiting list. Will his patient quest be rewarded by success? That is a question that automobile manufacturers are anxiously asking themselves. No one who knows Mr. Edison doubts that he has got pretty nearly what he says he has in his storage battery. Mr. Edison has never been of that type of man who announces that he has something which time sooner or later proves that he has not.

To invent and perfect an electrical storage battery for widespread commercial use has been the dream, the ambition, of Mr. Edison for years. Nay, it has been his hobby, to the practical exclusion of all other scientific investigation. He has worked day and night over the problem; he has frequently thought he stood on the threshold of success, only to be disappointed the next day, or week.

In all these years that he has been struggling with the problem interviewers have had a hard time to get him to talk on any subject other than his storage battery. His fellow scientists have twitted him good-naturedly on his lugging in of the battery at every possible turn of conversation. It is scarcely to be doubted that he has given more time and thought to the battery than he did to any one of his many inventions that are now benefiting mankind immeasurably. Mr. Edison himself declares that until he has perfected a storage battery along the lines that he has laid down for himself he will not feel that he has done his full share of the world's work.

When one realizes how earnestly, and with what singleness of purpose, one might say, Mr. Edison has pursued the problem of the storage battery, does not the Wizard's more or less prolonged trips here and there over the face of the country in anxious search for the much desired "evil spirit" of the old Saxon miners savor of the intensely dramatic?

Cobalt, this gnome, this evil spirit that holds such rosy promise for the future, has been practically unknown to the average person. Let us see what it is and what it does.

It is the principal ingredient of a coloring matter known as smalt, which is employed by laundresses to correct the yellow color of newly washed linen, and by paper manufacturers as a blue pigment for staining writing papers and coloring wall paper. Smalt is the only substance that will give a lasting blue to paper, and, until an artificial ultramarine was introduced, it was used exclusively for this purpose. Smalt is obtained by fusing roasted cobalt ore with pearl-ash and quartz sand. The molten mass is poured into water and finely powdered. This powder it is that is used after the fashion of indigo and to stain the dainty blue note-paper that is a favorite nowadays for carrying tender messages around the world.

Cobalt, when compounded with oxygen, also gives a blue color, and oxide of cobalt is used exclusively to color glass, porcelain and pottery. The coloring properties of cobalt blue, essentially the oxide of cobalt, is so great that the addition of one-thousandth part of cobalt blue to white glass is sufficient to make the glass a decided blue.

Cobalt blue, as a pigment, is used by painters and water color workers; they could not get many effects without it. Old Sevre blue, a very famous porcelain blue, King's blue, Thenard's blue, variegated blue, turquoise blue, deep blue, employed in porcelain coloring, all more or less widely known blues, have cobalt for their base. And then there is zaffre, a flaky blue crystalline stuff, that is used for the ground work of the old-fashioned blue and gold sign boards. The presence of oxide of cobalt as a base makes it blue. So remarkably does cobalt possess the power of "making things blue," to use a common expression, that even the faintest trace of it will render iron slag distinctly blue. It could almost be said, in all truth, that cobalt, in compound, blues the world.

Had it not been for cobalt the writers of the old fashioned adventure novel would have been deprived of one of their stock and always thrilling incidents—the invisible letter, written between the lines of the visible letter, and always reaching the heroines in the nick of time and keeping her from dying of anguish or hope long deferred.

A chloride of cobalt, when dissolved in a great deal of water, gives invisible or sympathetic ink. A faint pink in color when in dilute solution, the color is not discoverable when used on paper. Only when the piece of paper is heated before a fire, thus causing the chloride to lose the water, does the writing stand out blue, thus enabling it to be read with ease. The writing can be made invisible again by putting the paper in a damp place or by holding it over a steaming kettle, a la the heroines of long ago.

According to "Watt's Dictionary of Chemistry," these are the properties of cobalt: "Steel gray, lustrous, crystalline plates; nearly white when polished; hard; somewhat malleable; very ductile at red heat and upwards; slightly magnetic, even at full red heat. The compact metal does not oxidize in air at ordinary temperatures."

Chemically, cobalt is classed with iron, nickel and manganese in the iron group. In many respects it closely resembles both iron and nickel, the latter more than iron. It is found associated with silver, nickel, iron, manganese and bismuth. It is difficult to separate cobalt from its associates, especially nickel. It is seldom mined for itself alone; it is able to secure it as a by-product of the day may not be far off when cobalt will be mined for its greatest quantity cobalt produced as an accessory of

There is evidence to use of cobalt in coloring the rediscovered secrets. Modern Europe did not property of cobalt oxide before that time the metal to be worthless, in common now of itself—except in battery, of course. Blue glass recovered from ancient been found to have cobalt their color.

Not until almost two after the first commercial gnome metal was discovered did Brandt recognize it as a metal. Now, nearly two quarter centuries after Brandt's discovery, the element proved commercially useful, a startling revolution in the only it can be produced in quantity and purity to Unless it can be found in a relatively pure state the process will render its use in son's factory impracticable.

The principal localities where the metal got its start, Norway; Tunabergsen, Rhenish Prussia; a little spot in Missouri, where a pure variety of as speiss cobalt, free of recently been found; and it is mined as an accessory of

The Canada mines have been opened. The present in the Dominion was not a big cut for a new virgin forest revealed its customary bed-fellow, the latter metal at once the influx of miners, who making the discovery of cobalt would be a boon to the mines. However, appreciable percentage of supply of cobalt in Ontario. Roundabout and silver-like diggings there are several thousand into existence, and the traveler to Chicago without into the very heart of only a few miles of wilderness. THE OLD SAXON MINERS
IN CONTEMPT, DUBBED
IT KOBOLD, 'EVIL SPIRIT'

Hank, the guide, peeped into the coffee pot and then sat down on a log to await the boiling.

"The queerest reptyle ever I met," he said, "was up in Utah. Drifted into Whisky Ike's parlor one evenin', and feelin' pretty good, shot a few holes through the ceilin', not meanin' no harm. Bimby down comes a little feller with nothin' on but his pants, shirt and spieckles and looks me over. He was a funny lookin' critter, cock-eyed, long body and short legs, like one of them—what do you call them dogs, Clawed, what they bring up under a bureau so their legs can't grow?"

"Dachshunds."

"Yes, I reckon them's it. His legs was so short that when he stood up his feet just touched the floor and that's all. Pretty soon he says, 'I must insist that you cease shootin' through my bedroom. It is very annoyin', and if you do so any more I will be compelled to take the law into my own hands.'"

"How so?" I ask, curious enough.

Well, he goes down in his pocket and fishes around for a spell like he had lost somethin', and finally ~~comes~~ <sup>pulls</sup> up a little peewee, putty shootin' weppin about the size of a cigarette and holds it out in front of him like a woman hists up a dead rat by the tail. 'I shall shoot back,' says he, frownin'.

"For a minnut I was knocked speechless, then I come to slowly. 'Of all the sawed-off, hummered-down, nail-bitin' death-breathin', roarin', tearin' bullies ever I seen, you are the wust,' I says, and turns away. But the next mornin', as I was settin' speculatin' on the hereafter, up comes this same little banty and hires me to take him into the hills. Come to find out he was a huggist, one of them fellers that is always stickin' their noses into the private business of toads and reptyles to find out what they are doin' when they are home and their doozies of their families. Well, we found out in a way that would make a palisadin'er look like a lunch counter and struck out, and immediate that feller commenced to get hussy. Every time he would see a damned hing a-crawlin' along the trail he wanted to get off his cayuse and foller him home. Durindest fool."

"About a week afterwards I seen that we had jumped the claim of an old grizzly. First I noticed where he had wallered and then rubbed up against a ramprille and slashed it with his claws—settlin' his trademark on it and stakin' out his claim to that range. I didn't say nothin', but at last the dude seen it himself, and blame me if he didn't know what it meant—never was so surprised in my life. He got interested at once, buzzin' around here and there like a fly on a free lunch. Said he wanted to take a picture of him with the little box he had packed on his back, wanted to foller him up and take his fotografat at close range. I told him nothin' would make me more happier; that I dearly loved to set down beside a grizzly and swap news with him—kind of a fad of mine—but that I always waited until a circus come along before gratifyin' my wisherkin'."

"Oh, sugar! They won't hurt you," he answered. "Don't be afraid. I have read all about bears in books, and they ain't dangerous."

"That's all right, too, but suppose he happens to be a gum chune bear?" I asked.

"A what?" says he.

"A gum chune bear. Never heard of one? I am surprised that you didn't read about them in your jography. A gum chune bear is a grouchy old bachi, or maybe a dissipated old maid, what sits down on sassyety and longs to wipe it out. He noses around until he gets a big wad of spruce gum and he chaws on that day after day to strengthen his jaws. When he gets so he can chew a crow-bar off first shot out of the box, then he goes a wootin' trouble. Better stop a little careful with this bear, pard; he might be a gum chune."

"Well, instead of searin' the little skeeter, that only made him more anxious to spy the hunter. I should dearly love to see a gum chune that I might inspect his maxillaries," says he, without never they might be. I didn't say no more, but I thought if a little, half-grown son of a microbe like him dast stay in the same country with a grizzly, a full-grown man like yer Uncle Hank ought not be afraid to walk up to one and pull his whiskers out. Well, we camped there, and, sure enough, a couple of days after I run into the tracks again, smokin' hot, so I hops back right lively to camp.

"The huggist was backed up against a tree with a pair of blinders on. Said he was examin' the hairs on the legs of skeeter to see what trike he belonged to, but when I told him I had rounded up his game he dropped the insect sudden. 'Where is he?' asks the little man. 'About half a mile up the gully you-er. Better straddle along right pert, 'cause I didn't tie him none too fast,' says I.

"Certain; to be sure. Had I best take my weppin'?" he says.

"As you please," says I. 'But I wouldn't advise you to peek at him overmuch with it. If you ever hit a pore ear with that piece of ordinance, there wouldn't be enough left of him to pick up on the pint of a pin and examin' through that magnifyin' machine of yourn.' But he fetches it along, just the same, and purty soon we come to the necks, which same were about the size of a wash-tub. The perfesser takes off his glasses and polishes them a bit, then reaches up his leather and takes to the trail. Here, you galoot! I yells. 'It don't make no difference to me which way we go but if you foller them that way long enough you will come to the place where your bear was borned. You have got the back track, pardner.'"

"Ah, I see," says the perfesser, rubbin' his chin. "Mebby you are right. Yell try the oppposite way first." He turned around and nosed off in t'other direction, him a-lookin' at the trail and me a-lookin' at the rear and lookin' at everything else. Then all at once I seen the critter—we were a-peekin' for. His nose was pointed towards us, his head hangin' low and swingin', and his mouth full of the prettiest teeth ever I looked at. The fool biggest was bendin' over the trail, and I reckon he would have run plumb into t'other's mouth and disappeared forevermore if I hadn't ketched him by the part that was handiest and yanked him back. There's your blame clumpink," says I. "Ain't he just lovely?"

"Magnificent. The Ursus horribilis in his native wild. What a picture to show Dr. Dodo down east!" says the perffesser. He uncinched his camery and commenced to sneak up closer, sayin' soothin' like, 'So bear, good bear,' as he peereded. "Pretty quick old Eph skinned his lip and commenced to cuss and rumble down in his insides, and I let out a holler: 'Better take your fotygraf and hock water strong, 'cause there's gon' to be stranger doin's almost immediate, mister,' I sings; and I hadn't got the words out of my mouth before he gives a 'woof' and comes for us like a steam engine. I had been expectin' the same all along, and the good Lord had caused me to see under a limb that I could just jump up and grab handy; so up I goes, and no sooner had I got on the grandstand than the percession passed along.

"First came the perffesser, and it was amazin' to gaze upon the way that stilled-dugged cussed stampedede when he went got interested. Under the limb he went so fast that I could hear him whiz, his legs gon' like the drive-wheels of a locomotive on a slippery track. And as he went he was sayin' to himself, 'Run, you little fool. Now you've done it, ain't you, dang you!' like he was sort of findin' fault with himself for somethin'.

"I yanked out my .44 army as the bear came smortin' by and let him have a romp in the shoulder. He went heels-over-headers, but was up in a second, and faw-faw-bustin' his suspenders to make up for his time. 'Not havin' anything betterkleck to do, I dropped down and trailed along after them, thinkin' if I could grab the bear by the tail mebbe I could hold him back a couple of minutes, by which time I figured the perffesser would be back in Boston. But though I straddled along uncommon active, seemin' as how I have got a spavin and a couple of ringleones, I soon seen I was like a mud turtle a chasin' a rabbit. Then I remembered when I was a kid at school I heard the teacher say that the hypothermoose of something was the shortest distance between two points, and, hearin' that in mind, end across lots, figurin' on headin' them off.

"Well, I made it and arrove first in a jiffy finish. The little man was still gon' as fast as former, puffin' and blowin' most tremendous. When he seen me a look of genuine joy perched on his features, and he changed his course and came a-sailin' by within two feet, disappearin' with a whi-thin' sound. But at the same time the grizzly side-stepped, too, and come straight for me, ears laid back, mouth open, breathin' fire.

"Some fellers would have got right down on their bendlers and prayed, but I only girded up my loins, and sayin', 'I deliver us from evil,' right earnest, popped over a tree trunk and skedaddled down the hill somethin' wonderful. Next minit I hears somethin' go 'pop,' and takes a peep over my shoulder, and what do you suppose I seen? Notthin' but old Eph stretched out dead'n' a gerrin' and the little runt of a perffesser ettin' a-straddle of him and examin' his jaws. 'Genuine silver-tip grizzly,' he says, when I come up. 'Tuffick specimen.' Then he looks up at me and says, 'Where was you goin'?"

"Nowhere much," says I; 'just travlin' around and admirin' the scenery.'

"Must have seen a lot, considerin' the time you was travelin', he answers, with a funny grin.

"Yes, quite a chunk. How did you do it?" I asks, full of wonder.

"Oh, I just got behind a tree and shot him in the eye with my weppin as he come along. See!" He punted at the bear's eye with his bean shooter, and out came skin me and hang my pelt on the cabin wall if he hadn't done it slick and clean; somethin' no mortil man ever done afore or since with such a wepin in and a bear gon' at full jump. I couldn't say a word, couldn't even cuss—showin' how bad I felt. I just set down on a log and weeped.

"But that wasn't the worst of it. That next he developed his pictur and the next he showed it to me. It was the best bear-raisin' fotygraf of a grizzly comin' head on that was ever took by a human being. 'That will tickle Dr. Dodo most to death,' says the little bear-killer.

"'Pardner,' says I, holdin' out my hand, 'I hired out to you as a guide, but I can't earn the money. Heffer I will cook for you and wash your feet, and you be the guide, bear-fighter, pancobuster and roarin' bully of this outfit. When I go back to town I am gon' to quit guidin' and learn fancy swim'."

Hank stirred up the pot with a pine stick. "Pull up your rockin' cleers, fellows. Coffee's bilin'."

Educating the Filipinos

In the Philippine Islands 800 American and 6,000 Filipino teachers are busy educating nearly 500,000 pupils of all ages.

Mr. Scott, chief clerk of the Philippine Board of Education, said a few days ago that to per cent of the population of the Philippines, nearly 800,000, speak English, and that the Filipino boy when he reaches the age of nineteen is mentally superior to the American of the same age, but there his superiority ends, and our educational system has not lasted long enough to enable us to determine his capacity during the second period of his mental development.

The Filipino boy is inferior physically to the American boy at all stages, but the girl of the islands, according to Mr. Scott, though of small physique in early years, exceeds at the age of sixteen the physique of the American girl, and is incomparably superior to her native counterparts.

All the American teachers and 200 of the Filipinos are paid by the insular government. The others are paid by the municipalities.

The returning throngs of designers and dressmakers fresh from their summer explorations through the smart shops of Paris and London have brought over some very practical new ideas in semi-fitting short and long coats that will be hailed as a welcome departure from the tight-fitting styles of the past two years. The return of the gored flare skirt, which fits smoothly at hip and waist and falls into voluminous folds at foot, is also greeted with enthusiasm. The circular skirt is very pretty in theory, but its tendency to drag and dip at the sides makes it ungraceful. In the new skirts this sagging tendency is corrected by means of gores and plaits which give the new skirt the effect of being cupped. Its numerous seams enable the dressmaker to utilize narrow fabrics and secure the full effect of the circular skirt without disfiguring criss-cross seams.

Folds continue to be the favorite garniture for skirts. These may be cut to the exact shape of the skirt or made of bias material, and are usually lined with crinoline. Great care must be exercised to cut the crinoline on a true bias, otherwise dampness will cause it to "pull" and spoil the shape of the folds.

The Fifth Avenue shops are making a brave display of soft flannel waists in pearly shades of pink, pale blue and delicately tinted gray stripes and mixtures. All show the turnover collars and cuffs that the "Peter Pan" waists have endeared to us. The waists are more dressy and shapely than the "Peter Pan," inasmuch as nearly all of them have tucks or plaits of some sort over the shoulders, which add to the bust and the blouse effect. ## Oddities In New York Life.

There is no other city in the world set amid such varied and beautiful surroundings as New York; no city with such a pleasing prospect of land and water within and on its borders. There is a river teeming with traffic that divides it; a picturesque stream on its western line, backed by beetling palisades; a mighty sound with green islands, abutting on it, high hills and sloping vales within view; a broad, inviting bay locked within its arms, and miles of white sand going down to the sea. There, beyond the breakers, there is an open stretch of ocean reaching for 8,000 miles to the continent of the south pole.

New York City, has, ready for duty, in the state militia, 10,367 men.

The coolest place of retirement this summer in New York City is the Tombs, where there are two hundred and nineteen summer guests, twenty of them being accused of murder and the remainder various other felonies.

During the last six months there have sailed eastward from New York City 3,573 passengers.

Out of every hundred persons in New York City sixty-one are unmarried, thirty-one married, five widowed and five divorced.

During the last twelve months $40,-800 in precious stones were brought to New York City.

In New York City are about seven hundred signs that read "Watchmaker," and not a single one of them belongs to watchmaker, and few that have them could make a watch; and if they could did the watch would cost about $50, while any of them can sell a better watch for $20 that came from a great factory.

The ladies' street costume here illustrated is one of the smartest shown for the coming season. The jacket is one of the new-fitted models with an under-arm gore, a high, stylish, notched collar and a two-piece collar-sleeve. The under-arm gore has a crosswise trimming of three tailor stitched bands, an entirely new idea that is seen in quite a number of imported models. It is a very simple jacket to make, and would be very effective for wear as a separate coat or as part of a costume. The jacket Pattern No. 2157 is cut in sizes 32, 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Price 15 cents.

The skirt, No. 2158, is a beautiful new seven-gored model having a panel front gore and an inverted plait at back. It is suitable for Panama, voile, serge, chevot, or any suiting materials. The skirt Pattern No. 2158 is cut in sizes 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inches waist measure. Price 15 cents.

To obtain these patterns promptly, state number and size of pattern plainly and enclose 15 cents for each pattern desired. Be sure to give correct size.

In the United States during the first half of this year $260,000,000 was spent for new buildings in twenty cities, $13,000,000 more than was spent during the corresponding time last year in twenty-four cities. Of the $13,000,000 increase, $8,000,000 was in Greater New York, whose total was $88,000,000. Los Angeles spent $10,000,000 during the six months, an increase of $2,400,000.

In the fiscal year just closed Puget Sound sent abroad $17,000,000 worth of grain and flour, an increase of $12,700,000 over the last fiscal year.

June is never supposed to be a strenuous business month; yet railroad earnings last month went on increasing right along over the same weeks of June, 1905. Some of the items for the fourth week in this June are as follows: Wabash $176,000; Missouri Pacific, $175,000; Louisville & Nashville, $128,000, and Missouri, Kansas & Texas, $129,500. That is why railroad reports from Chicago say: "Despite all reports to the contrary, there has not been a summer in a good many years when everything looked as bright and prosperous as a present." Here are some of the gross increases for June: Vanderbilt system, $1,850,000; Illinois Central, $238,000; Yazoo and Mississippi Valley, $156,000. The Burlington's annual report, to be issued in August, will show $7,000,000 increase in gross earnings.

Thirty-four million barrels of Portland cement were made in this country last year, an eight hundredfold increase in twenty-five years. The value was $32,000,000, an increase of $31,874,000.

In the five years from 1900 to 1905 capital invested in American manufacturing has grown from $9,800,000,000 to $14,000,000,000, and the annual product from $13,000,000,000 to $17,500,000,000.

In the fiscal year just closed we absorbed more than a million immigrants. They brought with them $10,000,000 in cash. We need them and many millions more. The cry is heard from every part of our country: "Men wanted."

Our circulation of national bank notes increased $1,082,700 in June and $65,392,554 in the fiscal year which ended June 30, reaching $561,112,360, secured by an equal amount of the best bonds on earth—American government bonds. This is the highest recorded bank note circulation. Prior to 1902 the highest record was on October 1, 1882, $362,256,562. On July 1, 1891, the amount was only $167,557,214.

At Seattle in June sixty-four deep sea vessels arrived and seventy-eight departed; passengers inbound, 8,800, and outbound, 50,259. Imports, $1,449,780, and exports, $1,357,602, a total foreign commerce for the month of more than $2,800,000. This business was done with the Orient (mainly), England, British Columbia, South America, Siberia, Germany and South Africa. In addition, the total value of domestic water shipments was $5,613,382, making a total water commerce for June of $8,500,000.

Southern California reports some big crude oil contracts; 20,000,000 barrels for several private firms in Japan; 20,000 barrels deliverable daily by one company in the Los Alamos field; another company has agreed to deliver 10,000,000 barrels in Chile; still another company is buying three new tank steamers to carry California oil to Hawaii and Central and South America; yet another California company has almost completed its pipe line across the Isthmus of Panama. There will soon be an American Panama Canal, and American oil, with eight big receiving tanks, four at each end of the Isthmus, holding 200,000 barrels of oil.

Good American business is again reflected in the total money circulation on June 30 of $2,744,483,830, being nearly $108,000,000 more than on June 30, 1905, and $1,028,000,000 more than on January 1, 1879, the day on which Uncle Sam resumed doing business for cash. The present circulation is part of the general stock of money in the United States which amounts to $3,069,000,000, an increase of $12,000,000 in the month of June. The circulation is equal to $32.42 per capita of 84,662,000 population.

Grain receipts from January to May, inclusive, of this year, at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and New Orleans, amounted to $132,627,667 bushels, an increase of 41,000,000 bushels over the corresponding months of 1905 and 57,000,000 over the same period in 1904.

Reciprocity.

One day a learned professor was accosted by a very dirty little boothblack: "Shine your shoes, sir."

"I don't want to shine, my lad," said he, "but if you'll go and wash your face I'll give you a sixpence."

"A' right, sir," was the lad's reply, as he went over to a neighboring fountain and made his ablutions. Returning, he held out his hand for the money.

"Well, my lad," said the professor, "you have earned your sixpence. Here it is."

"I wanna want it, old chap," returned the boy, with a lordly air. "Ye keep and get yer hair cut."

Pinless China.

A member of the Chinese Legation arrived in splendid pale and hued silks and before the Casino at Newport.

"Pins," he said, "cause untidy habits. We have no pins in China. The right way to fasten things is with buttons and buttonholes, or with loops and frogs. To fasten things with pins is to make use of an untidy makeshift. To employ pins is to become lazy and slovenly."

"We have no pins in China. Certainly foreign manufacturers shipped millions of them to us in the past, but we sent them back. We had no use for them. We were too neat."
